The Great British political parties behind the loyal U-KOK campaign, the Caledonian Conservative and Unionists (the funders) and London Labour in Scotlandshire (the scapegoats), have been having a few problems with meetings this week, in yet another serious setback to Alex Salmond's plans to break up Britain.

The party of the hard-working (and fully employed) man had booked rooms in the Thornhill Road community centre in Falkirk, and were about to hold their perfectly legal and legitimate meeting, when they discovered the awful truth.

Under cover of darkness, a bunch of Natz troublemakers had suddenly, and without warning, decided to set up stalls outside the party's chosen meeting rooms, just as they had been doing on this very day for each of the last 14 years.

Not knowing the intentions of the undemocratic thugs, but fearing the worst, the courageous Slabour politicians immediately cancelled their meeting and set about the separatists, letting them know exactly what they thought about this sort of threatening behaviour.

Bravest of them all was Michael Connartyst MP who "led the attack" on the dangerous SNP ladies who were openly selling bedding plants for party funds, but whom he suspected of planning far worse.

"Youse Cybergrannies are out of control and must be stopped", he told the shocked flower girls. "Who knows what youse might have done if we had failed to scupper your splittist plans. We don't want your pernicious, divisive herbaceous borders here!

"Youse people strive for nothing less than the total destruction of of Great Britain. You want to separate our country into a good bit and a bad bit, as if it was the RBS with a "Good Bank" on the high streets of Scotlandshire and a "

Bad Bank

" in the City of London.

"Well, as someone who is banking on a good job with the bad bank to augment his meagre MP's pension, I can tell you that that's not how the modern Labour party swings. Besides, with all the flipping expenses I've had to repay, I need the bloody cash. Duckhouse moats don't clean themselves, you know.

"Your 'separation' would see me out of a f*ckin job! Why would anybody want to vote to put me on the dole? And that, Ladies, is why we refer to you as the Seps. Well, that and the fact that you lot are all septuagenarians."

Asked after the confrontation what he thought the protestors had been planning, Mr Connartyst said, "I believe they were planning to rake our bins. I know the bins are nowhere near the community centre, but you can't be too careful where these people are concerned. You read about this sort of thing all the time, after all.

"I'm well aware of what the Seps are capable of, you know. As a Labour MP, I know exactly what's going on. I read the Daily Mail – daily!"

Local separatist councillor David Alexander told this channel, "I have heard of meetings being called off by the threat of demonstrations, but I have never heard of such a pile of pansies being scared by the threat of some little old ladies armed with a bunch of Begonias."

We're sorry to announce the National Conference due to be held this Saturday 10th May is cancelled - due to lack of interest and declining youth membership numbers only 12 tickets have been sold and at this late stage the event appears to no longer be viable.

Those who have paid for their tickets will be refunded in due course.

The Annual General Meeting will continue as billeted - entry will be free in the same location starting at 2pm.

~~Shouldn't have been a surprise that the SNP didn't want to be associated with a new absolutely genuine grassroots organisation and that they didn't want to be associated with the "vote NO – vote Nob Orders".~~

Malcolm Offroad co-Director of Nob Orders told us, "We had also planned a members meeting in Edinburgh but, since both of us were in the office in London that day, we abandoned those plans and went for a nice lunch instead. Courtesy of you lot, donchaknow. Thanks a million, by the way."
